

Clockwise from top left: The Highlight Room Grill at Dream Hollywood; the tranquil pool deck at Four Seasons Los Angeles at Beverly Hills; the entrance to the serene La Prairie Spa at Waldorf Astoria Beverly Hills; one of La Peer Hotel's beautifully designed rooms.

HOTEL BUZZ

CHECKING IN

The latest news from L.A.'s finest luxury hotels will have you dreaming of staycations galore.

By Nadine Jolie Courtney

So many properties around town are rolling out a series of exciting experiences and renovations this fall. First up, Four Seasons Los Angeles at Beverly Hills is offering the Doheny Suite Experience (from $2,250 per night, fourseasons.com), with perks including planeside domestic pickup, monogrammed slippers and butler service. Farther west, The Peninsula (peninsula.com) has partnered with Rolls-Royce to allow guests staying two or more nights to enjoy a one-day coastal drive in a 2019 Cullinan

SUV (from $8,600 for one car) followed by a vino-infused lunch at Tolosa Winery. Guests will then transfer to San Luis Obispo airport before jetting back to Beverly Hills on a private plane. Meanwhile, Waldorf Astoria Beverly Hills has introduced the La Prairie Day Escape package (from $1,775 for four people, waldorfastoriabeverlyhills.com), featuring Signature La Prairie facials or Swedish massages, cabana and pool access, fresh fruit and Champagne, and more. In WeHo, the La Peer Hotel (from $450 per night, lapeerhotel.com) is debuting a new rooftop music series with Aaron Colbert Entertainment, which includes cabaret seating and an intimate concert each Wednesday, as well as DJ-enhanced swim days. Dream Hollywood (from $275 per night, dreamhotels.com) is partnering with Gunnar Peterson on a lean-protein menu, a seven-minute workout turndown amenity, and in-room reiki and body wraps. Finally, in anticipation of its 10th anniversary in 2020, The Ritz-Carlton, Los Angeles (from $429 per night, ritzcarlton.com) has just completed a major renovation throughout by L.A.-based Rottet Studio. Guest rooms are reimagined with art deco motifs, a mirrored glass headboard, and gold and bronze accents. Sounds glam!

DESIGN BUZZ

STREET appeal

You may not need another reason to linger within the La Cienega Design Quarter; but we've got a good one. Actually, two. New showrooms for B. David Levine (bdavidlevine.com) and Una Malan (unamalan.com) recently threw open their doors within a block of each other on either side of Willoughby Avenue. For Levine, who's operated out of Studio City for the past decade, the new multiroom space is a dream realized. A longtime dealer and collector of high-end Italian furnishings and accessories, he has made his atelier an ode to cutting-edge brands rarely seen outside of Salone del Mobile Milano. "We're bringing the best of the best—things that have not been brought to the U.S. and certainly have not been brought to the West Coast," says Levine. Malan, on the other hand, firmly established herself on La Cienega two years ago within a historic John Elgin Woolf building and this year snapped up a second spot two doors down. Her latest showroom, which is open and contemporary in stark contrast to her cozier 1930s-era original, focuses on beautiful fabrics. "We're taking on Rose Uniacke from the U.K., a lovely set from Designs of the Time from Belgium and Logan Montgomery Textiles' first indoor-outdoor fabric," she shares. —KPB

From top: Una Malan recently opened a new showroom; the amethyst bathroom basin from Crivelli of England is exclusive to the B. David Levine showroom.